A Sound Business Creed--It's Ours

We believe that right buying and selling is simply being as fair with each other as we both know how to be, and sharing profits.

We believe that our port is to look to the honesty of the goods we sell you even more closely than you look when you buy.

To make only promises that we can keep and, having made them, to keep them at all costs, under all conditions.

To avoid the unreliable, to sell only goods that we can back with our word and our money. It's easy to live up to that creed with because their quality, their style, their fit and workmanship back up the best we can say for them, and the makers back up our money--back agreement.

Clothes made by the House of Kuppenheimer

So there's satisfaction all around.

We have suits at $30.00, $28.00, $25.00, $20.00 and down to $15.00 with our guarantee.

An Interesting Exhibit.

We extend a cordial invitation to the public to examine a collection of newspapers from the most remote parts of the world now on exhibit at our office. These papers were sent to us by the Chamberlain Medicine Company, Des Moines, Iowa, manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and one of the heaviest advertisers not only in this country but in foreign lands. A copy of each issue of every newspaper containing their advertisements is sent to the office of the Chamberlain Medicine Company as a proof of the insertion of the advertisements. The package sent to us is selected from those vouchered papers. Some of the papers bear names of places which require us to recall forgotten geography or refer to the atlas to locate. Some of them are particularly curious as they are published in the vernacular or native languages which might be likened to the carefully written notes of a shorthand writer.

We find the well known Chinese characters arranged in vertical lines reading from top to bottom, the lines arranged from right to left. "Sin Wan Pao," published daily at Shanghai is printed on a strip of tissue paper fifty inches long and two feet wide. The paper is extremely thin and is printed on one side only. It is one of the most "readable" papers published as one can read the entire paper by a sort of unrolling process without having to turn a page or fold and unfold the sheet.

The Burmese language, as printed, is composed principally of a combination of circles. Some one wittily suggested that for this reason drivers would properly printed in this language.

Gingalese, the language of Ceylon, is also curvilinear. Japanese and Chinese are composed largely of vertical lines, some of which are loops at either top or bottom, but rarely at both. These languages bear some resemblance to the vertical writing now practiced in our public schools.

The four hundred million people of India have nearly fifty different dialects or vernaculars. The Chamberlain Medicine Company advertises in ten of the principal ones, as follows: Bengali, Gujarathi, Hindi, Kanarese, Malayalam, Marathi, Sindhi, Tamil, Telugu and Urdu. The Sindhi and Urdu are written from right to left in the Hebrew fashion. The Urdu is a sort of script and is so chaotic in shape that it is impossible to reduce it to the movable type form. Papers printed in the Urdu language are therefore first written out by hand and a plate made by the lithographic process. The "Oudh Akhbar," a sixteen page daily published at Lucknow in this language, claims a circulation of about 5,000. It is said that in order to handle this circulation it requires an office force of about 200. Fortunately for the managers, the wages paid to natives are only a few cents a day. The "Chahya Pulan" is an Arabic paper published weekly at Georgetown on the Island of Penang, Straits Settlements. The Arabic is also a "backward" language.

We are informed that the Chamberlain Medicine Company advertises in newspapers printed in thirty-two languages. Besides the vernaculars and the well known European languages, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, German, etc., the list embraces a number of languages which until comparatively recent times possessed no alphabet but for which the Roman alphabet has been adopted. Among these are the native Hawaiian, Samoan, Tagalog (Philippine Islands), Kahri, Zulu and Basuto, of South Africa. There is also a modern form of the Malay language using Roman characters, known as Romanized Malay. This is used in Java and the East Indies.

It is difficult to conceive how the readers of some of the papers manage to handle them. Imagine a man or a crowd of street car riders, to read a paper whose pages are thirty-eight inches long and twenty-nine inches wide. This is the size of the "Elbadhi," a Bengali weekly published in Calcutta, India. The "Cape Times," an English daily published at Cape Town, South Africa, is almost as unwieldy, its pages measuring twenty-seven and one-half inches in length and twenty-five inches in width.

To an American newspaper man it is interesting to note the manner in which the colonial English newspapers are made up. They still cling to the methods which were practiced in this country fifty years ago, the advertisements being upon the first few pages, followed generally by the heavy editorials, then a few meager cable and telegraphic items, afterwards the local news. The local news consists principally of the proceedings of the legislative bodies, town council, school board, etc. Contributions by the readers are numerous and lengthy. The editorials are generally of a more dignified and serious nature than American productions. The daily papers devote more space to book reviews and detailed reports of scientific progress than American newspapers do. Humor is not so noticeable and cartoons are used more rarely than with us.

Very few, if any, of the colonial papers issue a "pink sheet," but they supply this omission by devoting a large proportion of every issue to the sporting news. This is especially noticeable in the African papers.

With few exceptions the advertising pages would give our ad writers the nightmare. They seem to have little conception of the value of space or of attractive methods of presenting either the text or the illustrations. A pleasing relief to this monotony is afforded by the ads. of American advertisers which are rather numerous on their pages. We see many old friends among these advertisers.

Flanagan-White.

John Flanagan and Miss Mabel White of Vesper were married at the Catholic church in this city on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. Rev. Wm. Reeling performed the ceremony. They were accompanied by Thos. White, brother of the bride, and Miss Lizzie McCamley, of this city. The wedding party consisting of about twenty-five, left on the eleven o'clock train for Vesper, where a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph White. There were about fifty invited guests in attendance at the home where a very pleasant time was had. The young couple left the same day for Leavenworth, S. D., where the groom has a farm and where they will make their home.

Both of the contracting parties are well and favorably known both at Vesper, their home, and in this city, and they have many friends who will wish them a long and happy wedded life. The Tribune unites with these friends in extending congratulations.

Work at the Experiment Station.

Prof. C. B. Hardenburg of the University of Wisconsin arrived in the city last week and has again taken up his work at the experiment station in the town of Orono. Mr. Hardenburg is an entomologist and has for a number of years past been studying the insect life on the marshes in this vicinity with a view to getting a complete collection of all the bugs and worms that are in any way harmful to the cranberry and also learn their habits so that it will be possible to combat their inroads as much as possible. The station at Orono will be under the supervision of O. G. Mulde again this year the same as in the past.

Married Tomorrow.

Miss Hattie Wach and Arthur Wenzel, both of this city, will be married tomorrow at the German Lutheran church on the east side, Rev. Maack to officiate. The wedding occurs at 6:30 p. m. after which there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents and the young people will take their departure the same evening for the south on a week's wedding tour after which they will return to this city to make their home. They will be at home to their friends after June 1st.

Paid a Fine of Five Dollars.

Martin Polanski of Sigel was taken before Justice Fritzinger on Monday on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Polanski had got rather too big a load aboard and was driving about town making more noise than was absolutely necessary, so the police caught him in. The judge made it five and costs, and the amount was paid.

Given Thirty Days.

George Casey was given thirty days in the county jail last Wednesday, he having committed an assault on Officer Gibson. Casey had just got thru serving a thirty day sentence in the county jail, and upon being released immediately started a search for booze and trouble, both of which he found.

Arrested for Cruelty.

George Wallock was arrested for cruelty to animals and when taken before one of the local justices he pleaded not guilty to the charge and adjournment was taken until the 27th instant.

Fined for Assault.

Perry Gritfin was before Justice Fritzinger on Monday on a charge of assault and battery, the complaining witness being Herman Podawiltz. The defendant pleaded guilty to the charge and paid a fine of three dollars and costs.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stamm left on Tuesday for Milton Junction where they will visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Courtney.

Council in Session.

The city council met for the last time on Tuesday evening and passed out of existence and the new council men took their seats and commenced on the business of the city where the old ones left off. The new councilmen were Ernest Andrew, Ed Reine, Rob Nash and J. J. Jeffrey.

One of the matters that was taken up at this meeting was the franchise that is to be asked for by the Grand Rapids Street Railway company. The proposed franchise was read one section at a time and was discussed freely, and anybody who did not understand all of the provisions was privileged to ask questions and have it explained to them. This was done for the reason that when the matter comes up at the next meeting of the council everybody will understand what is being asked of them and be prepared to speak their mind.

The council passed a chicken ordinance, making it a misdemeanor to allow your chickens to run over your neighbor's property. This will probably be as much of a dead letter as several other ordinances that have been passed by the council.

The mayor made his appointments for the coming year which are the same as last year with the exception of police which matter was held over for the present.

It was decided to appoint a pondmaster for each side of the river. The city attorney was also instructed to notify the Wisconsin Central company to place a flagman at their crossing where the track crosses Grand Avenue.

The council will meet again next Wednesday night to take up the street railway franchise, as the officers of the company are anxious to get this thing as soon as possible as they are ready to commence work.

Concert a Success.

The concert given by the Ripon Madolin and Glee Club at the Daily Theater last evening was a most pronounced success from start to finish. Both the vocal and instrumental selections were greatly appreciated by the large audience, and the liberal applause and many encores testified to the opinion of those in attendance. There was a fine attendance, probably the largest that has ever been tendered any similar organization.

High Street Property Sold.

The deal was closed on Tuesday by which W. E. Nash became the owner of the John Steib property on South Third street, consideration said to be $4300. Mr. and Mrs. Nash have been making their home at Port Edwards, but will move to this city as soon as their new home is ready for occupancy.

W. L. Chambers.

For Sale at a Sacrifice.

Good 8 room frame house and two lots on Oak street. Good cellar and electric lights. Inquire of Wm. Gilson, Second Ave. North or phone 212.

Making Some Changes.

The Grand Rapids Brewing company have installed a new bottle washer during the past week, a machine that is right up to date and capable of handling a large amount of work in a day.

The company expects to engage in the manufacture of temperance drinks during the coming summer and will handle this business in connection with their regular business. One of the partitions has been torn out of their bottling house so as to give them the additional room necessary for the new work that they will take up.

It is also the intention to operate all of the machines in their bottling house with electric motors in the future instead of with a steam engine as has been the custom in the past. They figure that this will not only be cheaper, but that it will be a much better way of handling the work.

The Browning company has bought out the bottling works of Kline & Young, who has been known as the Twin City Bottling company, and will consequently have control of the entire business at this point.

Will Install Ice Cream Plant.

W. H. Barnes has decided to install a new ice cream plant in his candy kitchen, and expects to be able to supply his customers with anything they may want in this line in the future. He has purchased one of the latest models of continuous freezers and will be able to handle a large volume of business.

This is an idea that Mr. Barnes has been figuring on for a number of years past, and as he has had lots of experience in the business there is no reason why he should not make a success of it.

Will Build a Schoolhouse.

At a meeting of the St. Paul Lutheran church society held on Sunday last it was decided to build a school house, the present quarters being much too small for the number of pupils they are now accommodating. It is the intention to erect a building of brick, some ten feet by 24,000, one story high.

The Grand Rapids Hollow Concrete Wall Co., were awarded the contract last week to build a new cement depot at Hatfield for the Green Bay & Western Ry. It is the intention of the railroad company to build a first class depot as they expect that Hatfield will become quite a summer resort, and they will no doubt run Sunday excursions there later on.

Demonstration.

Of interior finishing by a factory representative of Chi Nam, factory, will welcome, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 22, 23 and 24, Central Hotel, Grand Rapids.

James MacIntosh bought out Ted Johnston's main interest in their station building and business on the east side last week. It is reported that the consideration was $43,000. Mr. Johnston has not decided on what he will do, but does not intend to leave the city.

Aug. Nimitz, who is flying on the N. P. Flyer out of Seattle, arrived in the city on Tuesday for a two weeks visit with his parents, August is on a way home from Iowa, where he has been to accompany the remains of a brother friend, who was killed in a wreck.

1,000 REDSKINS AGAINST 51 WHITES

BY EDWARD B. CLARK

WASHINGTON.—The senate of the United States has in its possession an official document which contains one of the most extraordinary graphic illustrations of Indian fighting ever written. The story in part is the account given by Gen. George A. Forsyth of his fight with the Sioux and the Cheyennes under the famous chief, Roman Nose, in eastern Colorado in the year 1868.

Gen. Forsyth went into the army from his native city, Chicago. He is now living in Washington. The odds against his forces in the fight with the band of Roman Nose were 20 to 1, and as the senate document has it—this part of it was not written by Forsyth—the battle "was a splendid example of the hardihood, courage and capacity to adapt themselves to circumstances which so generally mark the conduct of American troops on the frontier."

One of Gen. Forsyth's subordinate officers in the battle was Lieut. Frederick H. Beecher, a nephew of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Lieut. Beecher fought heroically and died just as the repulse of the Indians was imminent. Gen. Forsyth's description of the charge of Roman Nose and his red hand follows:

"In a few moments after our preparations were completed Roman Nose and his warriors swept around the bend of the stream, out of and well beyond rifle range, with a front of about 60 men and a depth of six or eight ranks. Each warrior was, with the exception of his cartridge belt and box and moccasins, perfectly naked and hideously painted. They rode bareback, with only a horse-hair lariat wrapped twice around the middle of their horses and passing loosely over each knee. Riding well in front of the center of his file, Roman Nose led the charge with a reckless gallantry that may have been equaled but could not have been excelled. Six feet three inches in height, and perfectly naked save for a single war bonnet on his head, a crimson silk sash around his waist, and his moccasins on his feet, showing immense breadth of shoulder, but, nevertheless, sinewy and slim, both in waist and flank, he sat well forward on his barebacked chestnut-colored charger, with his knees under the lariat that twice encircled his horse's body, and his rifle held just below the trigger in his left hand. His barrel in the hollow of his arm, while the same hand grasped both his horse's mane and bridle, leaving his right arm free to direct his men, and as he came charging on at the head of his command he was the very best ideal of an Indian chief.

"As soon as the charging warriors had fairly started toward us our immediate assailants, who lay under cover on the two banks of the river opposite an island, opened a rapid fire on us from both sides, with the intention of covering us to such an extent that we would not dare to rise from our rifle pits to open fire upon the attacking force, and so for a few seconds bullets fell everywhere around us.

"This I looked for, but I well knew that once the charging Indians came within range of the bullets of their own men their fire must necessarily cease. Glancing back over my command I saw that they had all turned in their rifle pits toward the foot of the island, the direction from which the charge was coming, and crouching low, with their knees well under them, their rifles closely gripped in their sinewy hands, their bronzed faces set like iron and their eyes fairly ablaze with wrath, they lay with nostrils all quivering, impatiently awaiting the command to fire.

"Suddenly the fire from the Indian riders ceased, and placing my back against my rifle pit and leaning on my elbows against its sides, I shouted: 'Now!' and Beecher, McCall and Grover echoed the cry.

"Instantly starting to their knees, with their rifles at shoulder as they rose, and with one quick glance along the barrel, 40 good men and true sent the first of seven consecutive volleys into the onrushing savage horde. Welcoming the first and second volleys with reckless yell, the charging warriors came galloping on, but at the third volley the most of them ceased to shout, and I could see great gaps in their ranks and men and horses going down, but still the mass of them bravely held their course, Roman Nose leading them and wildly waving his heavy Springfield rifle over his head as though it were a whip of straw, he alone shouting his defiant war cry as he swept toward us.

"At the fourth volley their great medicine man, who was leading the left of the column, went suddenly down, and for an instant the column seemed to check its speed, but only for a second, and then with a mad rush it came bounding and leaping onward. The fifth volley seemed to pile men and horses in heaps, and at the sixth Roman Nose and his horse went down in death together.

"A hundred feet farther and they will be upon us! But now the column hesitates and shudders, and the scouts pour in their last and seventh volley just as a few of the warriors reach the foot of our little island, and then springing quickly to their feet, with wild cheers and hurrahs, shout on their toes, the frontiersmen suddenly pour almost into the very faces of the mounted warriors a rapid fire from their revolvers, while the Indian column suddenly divides on each side of the island and breaks in all directions for the shelter of either shore, the row coming to their horses' necks, fearfully demoralized, and seeking only safety in water and headlong flight."

Gen. Forsyth was shot three times, but he dragged himself about to care for the wounded. Lieut. Beecher, shot in the side, turned to Forsyth and said, quietly and simply: "I have my death wound, general," and then as the commanding officer tells the story, he replied to his subordinate: "Oh, no, Beecher, no, it can't be as bad as that."

"Yes, Good night!" I heard him murmur once; "My poor mother! In the sunset his life went out."

"Good night, Good night!"

After the failure of their attempt to override the little band of soldiers the Indians beset the whites for nine days and the second chapter of the story has much of the stirring interest of the first, as it is told by the officer in command in that campaign on the eastern Colorado frontier.

With Col. Forsyth were 51 officers and men. Before the Indian lines were broken, as they charged down on the detachment the bullets of the Cheyennes and the Sioux found 24 victims, one-third of them being killed and the others badly wounded. Col. Forsyth had a bullet in his right thigh, his left leg was broken below the knee and his scalp had been torn open by a ricocheting shot.

Let Col. Forsyth tell the story of the siege:

"Orders were issued to unsaddle the dead horses, to use the saddles to strengthen our works, to connect the rifle pits and to deepen them still more and to cut off large stinks from the dead horses and mules and to bury them deep in the sand to avoid putrefaction."

"Having made the wounded as comfortable as possible with water dressings (the surgeon had been posted, I am wounded), and a strong guard having been posted, I am a few mouthfuls of raw horse flesh and dozed away until morning. The Indians, evidently believing that we would try to escape in the night, approached at early daylight to take up our trail. Owing to some one accidentally discharging his rifle they threw themselves flat on the ground and we succeeded in killing only one of them. The next day was very hot and we that were wounded suffered intensely.

"During all this time I noticed that there was a steady beating of drums and death chants among the women in the main camp of the savages. It was a weary enough day for we were out of food save horse, and mule meat, which we had to eat without cooking, but fortunately we had plenty of good water. At noon, Scout Grover informed me that the Indian women and children were beginning to withdraw and I concluded at once that the Indians had decided to give up the fight. Accordingly I penned the following dispatch:

"Col. Bankhead, or Commanding Officer, Fort Wallace: I sent you two messengers on the night of the 7th inst., informing you of my critical condition. I tried to send you two more last night, but they did not succeed in passing Indian pickets, and returned. If the others have not arrived, then hasten at once to my assistance. The Cheyennes alone number 450 or more. They are splendidly armed with Spencer and Henry rifles. We are living on mule and horse meat and are entirely out of rations. If it was not for so many wounded I would come in and take the chances of whipping the reds if attacked. I can hold out here for six days longer, but please lose no time. Very respectfully, your obedient servant, George A. Forsyth."

"P. S.—My surgeon having been mortally wounded, my wounded have not had their injuries dressed, so please bring a surgeon with you."

"I confided this to two excellent men, Donovan and Piley. They left our intrenchments at midnight, and as they did not return I was hopeful that they had escaped the vigilance of the Indian sentries and were on their way to Fort Wallace. It was these two men who fell in with Col. B. H. Carpenter's command two days later and gave the first intimation of our plight."

"The wound in my thigh having become exceedingly painful, I asked some of the men to cut the bullet out, but as it lay very near the femoral artery they all declined to attempt it. Taking my razor, which happened to be in my saddle bag, I managed to cut it out myself, greatly to my almost immediate relief. On the fourth day our horse and mule meat became putrid, but one of the men shot a little gray wolf that helped out somewhat."

"I had the men raise me on a blanket to get a better view of affairs and suddenly the Indians sent in a fusillade of about 20 shots. The man who held the corner of the blanket upon which rested my broken leg dropped it, and the surrounding town, we landed in a brilliantly lighted room that was as inviting and serene as a tropical isle. The contrast between it and the storm through which the party had come was curious in the extreme, but it added greatly to the joyousness of the occasion."

"On the day of the function we rode to the mouth of the tunnel, where we made our descent into the bowels of the earth through a fierce blizzard, one of the worst I ever saw in the west. Getting in the big cage that took us down the shaft to this queer banquet hall far below Leadville and the surrounding town, we landed in a brilliantly lighted room that was as inviting and serene as a tropical isle. The contrast between it and the storm through which the party had come was curious in the extreme, but it added greatly to the joyousness of the occasion."

"Evil Effects of Hate. Hawthorne: The hate we bear our enemies injures their happiness less than ours."

Trapping Mosquitoes

Here is a suggestion to end the most annoying pest in your house. Try it and see what it is worth. The following is taken from a popular report published by Uncle Sam. The consul tells of the awful annoyances caused by the mosquitoes in the suburbs of Calcutta. Life wasn't worth living there until Mr. Lefroy of the Indian entomological department invented a mosquito trap which appears to have solved the problem. The invention consists of a box 12x12 inches fitted with a hinged lid provided with a small opening, over which moves a sliding cover. The box is lined with dark green baize and has a tin floor. The trap is placed in a shady corner of the room and the mosquitoes on entering the house in the morning find the trap a delightful place in which to exclude themselves. When the morning rush of mosquitoes is over, a teaspoonful of benzine is injected into the box, which promptly kills the pests.

Unclaimed Bank Deposits. Massachusetts' treasury is likely to come in for a tidy sum of money under a recent decision of the supreme court of that state which holds that deposits in savings banks unclaimed for 20 years go to the commonwealth. The decision was rendered in a case brought to test the title of $100,000 of deposits in the Provident Institution for Savings left there for more than thirty years. The court says that the length of time that these deposits have been in the bank without any action by the depositors in regard to them furnishes a strong presumption that willingly or unwillingly or ignorantly the depositors have permanently abandoned them.

PUTS TAX ON FOOD

WHEREIN THE PAYNE BILL IS WHOLLY BAD.

Adds to Already Onerous Burden of the Poor—Better and More Equitable Method of Raising Revenue.

In his inaugural address Mr. Taft said: "In the making of a tariff bill the prime motive is taxation, and the securing thereby of revenues. The government's needs are pressing. Last year the deficit was $60,000,000. This year it promises to reach $130,000,000, and with the increase of about $40,000,000 in appropriations next year it may be even larger unless congress adopt prompt measures to raise more revenue."

According to the estimates of the ways and means committee the Payne bill now pending will produce a net increase in customs receipts of $11,666,748 as compared with those collected under the Dingley law in a favorable year. And to offset this inadequate increase it is proposed to levy new taxes on the breakfast table. Tea is to be heavily taxed. So is cocoa. A retaliatory tax is to be imposed on coffee from countries like Brazil, Guatemala and Salvador, from which we draw our largest supplies, because they levy an export duty. At the same time the reduction of the duty on sugar is so slight that the consumer will derive no benefit from it, yet this tax, as Wayne MacVeagh says, is especially "infamous," as it extorts from the laboring man an actual sum often in excess of the sum the same tax extorts from the richest multi-millionaire.

The tax on tea, cocoa and coffee is not protective. They are necessities of life, and must be imported. The tax on sugar, which is produced in this country in quantities far below the needs of domestic consumption, is not to be reduced because influential interests oppose a change to the advantage of the consumer. The cost of living already is oppressive, but in these respects it is to be made higher still. Staples like tea, coffee and cocoa are to be taxed and a high duty on sugar retained because certain privileged beneficiaries of the tariff demand immunity by law against fair competition.

For as the Payne bill taxes the breakfast table it is wholly bad. The government must have more revenue. But instead of taxing food, already far too dear for the working people of the United States, in the circumstances what way of raising revenue is there so expeditious and equitable as graduated income and inheritance taxes, both of which Mr. Taft favors?

Contemptuous of the West. We have senators, and even representatives, who apparently are not on the theory that the territory embraced by the thirteen original states is still the real American republic and that the great west, the northwest and southwest are still in a state of tutelage, almost like the Philippines and Porto Rico. This class of statesmen considers the west too immature to have any political voice worthy serious consideration.

The Payne tariff bill is deeply seared with these marks of distrust. It bristles with evidence of contempt for the west's judgment on economic matters. There is the tariff on the "ultimate consumer," who represents a newer Americanism. It looks after the interests of those Americans who populate the New England and Atlantic states. It offers a stone, instead of bread, to the millions upon millions of western farmers who are carving the real American destiny out of the exhaustless soil.

Roosevelt the Politician. No more consummate politician ever lived. A part of his mastery lay in his constant assumption that he knew nothing about politics, being a straightforward man whose skill was simple facts; but the others were children beside him. For knowing when to seize the occasion; for understanding perfectly how to hit popular feeling between wind and water; above all, for ability to impress and handle men, not simply, but by the hundred, thousand, and have not looked upon his like and count on his equality since. He has had that cold-blooded remorselessness without which it could not have been so successful. Friend or foe? or cause that it became necessary for him to throw over was abandoned without hesitation. His watchword ever was, "Get it done and let them howl!"—New York Evening Post.

Aimed to Perpetuate Plunder. So far as the Payne bill does reduce the tariff upon important staples, as in the steel, wool and paper schedules, it is a short step in the right direction. But it leaves tariff rates still far beyond defensible limits. It perpetuates the plundering of the consumer. It is a short step in the right direction. But it leaves tariff rates still far beyond defensible limits. It perpetuates the plundering of the consumer. It is a short step in the right direction. But it leaves tariff rates still far beyond defensible limits. It perpetuates the plundering of the consumer.

May Do Him Good. "Uncle Joe" was too stubborn. Power of the autocratic kind had unbalanced his judgment. He might just as well have made a few real concessions to the "insurgents" before hand, equivalent to the changes now jammed down his throat, and thus have saved himself the most uncomfortable day of his career.—Springfield Republican.

Here Must Save Themselves. Here we have public admission from the responsible party that under Republican administration the treasury has been again gutted, as it was during the Harrison regime of 20 years ago, and a great deficit resulting from heedless extravagance in the conduct of the government must be met by bond issues. This time, however, the Republicans must themselves pull the country out of the hole of their own digging. They cannot pass the task on to the other party as they did in 1893.—Springfield Republican.

What Mr. Roosevelt Has Given Up. Senator Dewey quotes Mr. Roosevelt as saying: "Most people, when they find they can't keep their job any longer, say that they are glad to leave it and devote themselves to their private business, which has succeeded. But I won't do that. I loved my job. I wouldn't have given it up if I could have kept it." Mr. Roosevelt is mistaken in thinking that he has given up his job. He is still in the business of self-advertising, and will keep it up as long as he lives. What Mr. Roosevelt gave up was not his job, but his megaphone.

Criminologists Interested. Countess Boos Farrar, a niece Archdeacon Farrar, has secured acres at Spring Valley, N. Y., and will build there a home for the children of criminals, to make a trial of the theory of inherited crime, as well as give homes to the waifs. She gives her time to the care of those sick in want.

The Touch Artist. "I'd like to take you to the theatre tonight, old man." "Thanks." "And I would if I had the price. Could you spare a five?"

REVISED BY ITS FRIENDS.

People Have Soon Learned What This Means in Connection with Tariff Changes.

The folly of turning over the Dingley tariff to be "revised by its friends" of the Republican persuasion is revealed in the discovery on the first day of tariff debate in the house that the Payne bill carries custom-house taxes which, in the average, are higher than those of Dingley.

The friendliness of Chairman Payne's committee on ways and means to monopoly rates is further seen in the reductions upon some western raw material and the sending of another of the free list without compensating concessions to the farmers who have to pay monopoly prices for the daily necessities they have to buy.

The claim by Champ Clark that the bill would increase the cost of living to the laboring man while affording no relief to the farmer is strikingly borne out by the hypocrisy of what is said about a tax on coffee. The bill proposes to keep coffee on the free list with the provision, however, that coffee imported from a country that pays an export tax on it shall pay duty at the same rate when it is brought to this country. That means, inevitably, a double tax on the poor man's breakfast beverage, for Brazil and most of the other countries from which we import coffee already have the export tax.

The tariff promises on which President Taft was elected are not and good in the Payne bill. The friend of Dingleyism in the ways and means committee have dealt tenderly with monopoly. We need not expect real revision until the work is entrusted to congress that is not composed of friends of such tariff as we have had during the last 12 years.

No "Iron Duke" Wanted. With blatant audacity and with the most serene ignorance of the meaning of what he was saying, Congressman Rodenberg of Illinois named Speaker Cannon before the Republican caucus as "the Iron Duke of American politics."

Mr. Rodenberg meant to pay Mr. Cannon a compliment. A study of the rest of the speech makes that apparent. But he was egregiously unable to see that it does not do to offer the congratulations of a democracy in terms of aristocracy. Blameworthy have been beyond criticism in the after world for forging the German empire. Peter the Great may have been a most effective despot, but Lincoln ever lived. But it is something akin to insult to compare to either the "servant of the people" who modestly holds office in a "republic." We never have wanted any iron dukes in America, as we do not want any of them today.

Mr. Rodenberg's erudite outburst must have been singularly awkward to Mr. Cannon, the speaker of the republic. The speaker has been trying to lay down during every moment of the session just ended. He must have grown call at hearing a supposed friend call it with such stupendous stupidity at the very moment when his obligation should have been most complete.

Only a Little One. Three hundred feet of the Panama railroad embankment at Gatun has settled to a depth of 20 feet. The landslide is at the same place where a similar movement occurred last November. This time the slide is westward, instead of toward it east. According to the Colon office news service, "little importance" attached to the occurrence. The hole will be filled with rock, as evidences of the slide will be ordered up. Some engineering experts are inclined to attach more importance to these slides. The Panama canal construction is too readily covered up. Even a little slide may be of importance, because it may have a big cause behind. Any evidence of instability at Gatun is important.

"Big Head" Among Diplomats. President Taft will confer a favor upon Americans abroad and establish a wholesome precedent if he will name his diplomatic appointees under the title of their offices, like all others, a public; that the American people, favored individuals, and the support of the Panama canal construction, too readily covered up. Even a little slide may be of importance, because it may have a big cause behind. Any evidence of instability at Gatun is important.

Payne's Foolish Contention. Chairman Payne's contention that the higher tariff taxes in his bill are mainly those on women folks until can convince them that gloves are stockings are luxuries rather than necessities of life. There is hardly a shopgirl in St. Louis who does not deem gloves almost as necessary a part of her street attire as any other piece of it. As for the men, it is a more going; imported gloves are worn as well as those made in this country. The remaining essentials being that he will hatted and well shod.—St. Louis Republic.

"Will the republic endure?" as Thomas W. Lawson. We unhesitatingly answer that it will unless, Messrs. Cannon and Aldrich happen wake up some morning with a feeling that it ought to be abolished.

It is just possible, too, that Senator Aldrich's opinion of the plan to place tax on dividends of corporations was not so suitable for publication.

Not for Her! "With one wave of my wand," said the fairy, "I can make you grow up again." "Because me," replies the woman, "I decline your kind offer. If you bring youth to me at my present age all right; but I positively refuse to travel back through pyrography, first stage of bridge, the habit of the straight front, balloon sleeves, all the rest of the fads I can remember.—Life.

MINE MADE INTO DINING ROOM

How the Founding of the Leadville Mining Camp Was Celebrated.

"On the first day of the present month I was a guest at one of the most remarkable dinners ever given," remarked Judge A. W. Fowler, the brand new congressman from Denver. "This banquet was held 1,000 feet below the surface of the earth in the chamber of a mine on the outskirts of Leadville. The chamber, which had been transformed into a magnificent dining room, was about 40 feet wide by 70 feet long and had a lofty roof. A kitchen had been improvised and a clever chef got up a dinner for 300 people that none of the swell hotels of New York would have repudiated. The guests were nearly all 'seventy-niners,' that is to say, pioneers in the old days of 1870, when Leadville's fame as a greater producer of the precious metals attracted the attention of the world."

"The feast was given in commemoration of the death of the mining camp, those who made merry were the adventurous souls who figured then."

"On the day of the function we rode to the mouth of the tunnel, where we made our descent into the bowels of the earth through a fierce blizzard, one of the worst I ever saw in the west. Getting in the big cage that took us down the shaft to this queer banquet hall far below Leadville and the surrounding town, we landed in a brilliantly lighted room that was as inviting and serene as a tropical isle. The contrast between it and the storm through which the party had come was curious in the extreme, but it added greatly to the joyousness of the occasion."

Evil Effects of Hate. Hawthorne: The hate we bear our enemies injures their happiness less than ours."

Uncle Joe was too stubborn. Power of the autocratic kind had unbalanced his judgment. He might just as well have made a few real concessions to the "insurgents" before hand, equivalent to the changes now jammed down his throat, and thus have saved himself the most uncomfortable day of his career.—Springfield Republican.

ECZEMA LODGES IN THE SKIN
Not a Blood Disease—Cured by Oil of Wintergreen Compound
—For many years eczema was supposed to be a blood disease and was erroneously treated as such, but now the best authorities agree that eczema is only a skin disease and must be cured through the skin. The eminent skin specialist, Dr. D. D. Donita, first discovered that eczema germ and his discovery was quickly taken up in both Germany and France.
To kill the eczema germ and at the same time heal the skin, Dr. Donita compounded the Oil of Wintergreen Compound. This remedy is a liquid, not a grease, hence it sinks right into the pores of the skin. Washing with this oil of wintergreen compound seems to take the itch away at once; soon the scales drop away and the disease disappears. John E. Daly. This description has now been used so long as to have proven its absolute merit and we do not hesitate to express our confidence in Dr. D. D. Soap.
PURE BLOOD.
The Secret of a Good Complexion—How to Attain It.
—Sufferers are beginning to realize that external applications will not rid the skin of the disfigurements of eczema, pimples, blackheads, rashes, etc. The remedy must go deeper, to the seat of the trouble in the blood.
And it is for this reason that the preparation known as Dr. Taylor's Remedy has been so successful, and has become so widely known and used. This really great blood purifier absolutely destroys all the poisonous germs in the system, and causes skin blemishes, its quick and thorough action, in even the worst cases of eczema, has surprised and delighted an enormous number of patients who had despaired of relief under the ordinary treatment of physicians and "so called" remedies. The record of Dr. Taylor's Remedy is therefore one of unflinching success, and in its use is surely found the secret of a clear, beautiful complexion.
An illustrated booklet describing the remedy will be mailed free by the Dr. Taylor Remedy Co., Philadelphia, and the remedy itself and booklet can be obtained at
and at all first class druggists.

One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin.
When a rooster finds a big fat worm he calls all the hens to the farm yard to come and share it. A similar trait of human nature is to be observed when a man discovers something exceptionally good—he wants all his friends and neighbors to share the benefits of his discovery. This is the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin. This explains why people who have been cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy write letters to the manufacturers for publication, that others similarly afflicted may also use it and obtain relief. Behind every one of these letters is a warm hearted wish of the writer to be of use to someone else. This remedy is for sale by Daly Drug & Jewelry Co.

Anything on Your Mind?

- SHOES vs HEALTH -
The shoes you wear have much more influence on your general health than you are apt to think. The pounding of hard heels greatly aggravates any nervous trouble, causing nervous headache or nervous dyspepsia. Wet feet cause grip, pneumonia and kindred ills. If you wear Treadeasy shoes you'll get no far and your feet will be dry at night.
